In its relatively short history, Duke University’s Fuqua School of Business, in Durham, North Carolina, has established itself as one of the leading business schools in the world. With a recent #1 ranking in the US, according to Bloomberg Businessweek, renowned faculty, and a robust global commitment, Duke Fuqua sits among the world’s top business schools.

GLOBAL: EMBEDDED AND CONNECTED

Leadership in the 21st century is defined by challenges and opportunities that are global in scope. These interconnected business environments demand a new kind of talent—grounded in solid business acumen and propelled by the global mindset and multinational networks. To become these leaders of consequence, our students not only learn from the world’s top business school faculty—they also engage with classmates who hail from all around the world; collaborate on projects in multinational teams; and experience cultures, societies, and economic systems that may contrast significantly with their own.

The cities and countries selected within these locations write their respective region’s rules and set its cultural tone:

- China
- India
- Latin America
- United Arab Emirates
- United Kingdom
- Russia

This global expansion is supported by the interdisciplinary culture and resources of Duke University.
